10 Reasons to Advertise in Indian Military Review

- 1 IMR's wide reach outstrips all other defence magazines. IMR is recommended for all formations and units by Army HQ.
- 2 IMR has the highest circulation and readership amongst defence magazines. IMR is compulsory for all officers undergoing training at IMA.
- 3 Good content is at the core of our editorial policy. IMR is recommended by USI of India for all officers taking promotion and Staff College entrance exams.
- 4 IMR is produced by former armed forces officers who are also fully conversant with the procurement process.
- 5 We are open to innovation for our advertisers.
- 6 Our rates are the lowest since we believe in fair pricing.
- 7 IMR, combined with the IMR website offers a good integrated media for all your communications to the armed forces and government.
- 8 IMR is often quoted in the press, television, research articles as a authoritative, reliable and trustworthy publication.
- 9 IMR is non-controversial. Government companies advertise in it.
- 10 Domestic and overseas companies alike prefer IMR for its true worth and reach; IMR is not just a "seen at the shows" magazine.

The fastest growing defence market in the world

Weapons and equipment needed for India's armed forces in the next 11 years translates to a cost of Rs15.4 trillion according to the Long Term Integrated Perspective Plan (LTIPP) for 2012-2027.

- Compulsory reading for all officers joining the Indian Army.
- Sold through all 500 Army Post Offices in the country.
- Recommended by USI for officers' promotion exams.
- Subscribed by the largest number of defence officers.
- Distributed across India on the newsstands.
- Distributed free to decision makers in the MoD and Service HQs.
